

I understand that Sinclair Broadcasting is forcing its stations to air the program entitled Stolen Honor. I'm not sure about the legality of this move, but I do feel that showing a propaganda film so close to the election and calling it news is at the very least inappropriate and underhanded. I also understand that Sinclair Broadcasting is a generous financial supporter of the campaign that stands to benefit the most from the airing of this program. It seems to me that there ought to be some guidelines for a huge broadcasting company such as Sinclair regarding the use of its powers. Since Sinclair stations use public airwaves free of charge, are they not required by law to serve the public interest? Please stop this unfortunate attempt to stifle democracy. Thank you.
